November Recommendation:

The Starlight Claim by Tim Wynne-Jones

Nate's best friend, Dodge, died in a boating accident on the lake where their families have a cabin. His body hasn't been found. Nate goes to the cabin alone for reasons he can't quite define, except that maybe he can find clues as to where his friend might be. When he arrives at his cabin, he sees that it is occupied and figures out that some escaped convicts have holed up there. He needs to find a way out of this situation - alive. He relies on all his survival skills, but will it be enough? This book is a fast paced survival book that also deals with loss and discovering what you are capable of.

Indigenous Focus:

Lightfinder by Aaron Paquette

This book is full of Indigenous legends and magic. I really enjoyed it at first, but by the end, I thought it was too much. I wasn't really believing anymore. However, it is a good story about good vs evil and how love can conquer all. It is a cautionary tale of how we need to protect Mother Earth.

Aisling's little brother Eric has run away and is being influenced by evil. She, her Kokum, aunty, and two friends set out to find Eric. On the journey they realize it is more than finding Eric. They need to save him and, at the same time, the future of the earth. Aisling and Eric both realize they have powers and will need to decide how to use them – for good or for evil.

Orca Books Recommendation:

Off the Rim by Sonya Spreen Bates

Dylan gets named to the starting lineup for the first game of the basketball playoffs. You would think things would be good, but he and his girlfriend, Jenna, get run off the road by a black pickup truck and then she starts getting threatening messages to keep quiet. She is not sure what she needs to keep quiet about, so the messages continue. While helping his team practice for the playoffs, Dylan and Jenna must also solve the mystery of the cyberbullying. If you like basketball, this one is for you as the book is full of play and strategy.
